ladies what launch: over it & co

Suzannah Pettigrew and Charlotte Hanlon are the founders of Over It & Co. They've got a book launch/exhibition coming up next week and Josh Jones thought he'd say hello and find out more about what they're doing.

Tell us about Over It & Co. What's that all about?

Over It & Co is a creative emporium. We represent, support, and nurture an eclectic selection of painters, illustrators, tattooists and designers. We connect our artists with brands and agencies to produce exciting and original work to a range of diverse creative briefs. We also produce our own shows and projects, as well as instigating and curating collaborative ventures.

How do you select your artists to be on your books?

We select artists that are greatly talented and are fun to work with. What's the point if it ain't fun?

Do you make them feel special?

Yeah of course. We give them the good biscuits with their cups of tea and tell them they're amazing.

So you're launching a book are you? What's in this book?

We sure are! This book provides an overview of the artists that we work with, as well as a selection of the shows, events and exhibitions that we've produced or been involved with in recent years. We feel that in a digital age the importance of seeing artwork in print has never been greater, and we are eager to share the work of our artists with the world. The Orange Dot Gallery in Bloomsbury will be our home for two weeks and you will be able to find our book and accompanying show there from Thursday 15 March until Friday 30 March.

Is it heavy?

It's well heavy in the down with the kids sense but if you're talking weight, not so much.

Where do you like to go and do things in this fair city?

The Barbican or the Barbs as we affectionately call her is a good place to work and drink tea. We both frequent galleries including the Tate, Whitechapel and the ICA. Afternoon windy walks up Hampstead Heath followed by a G'n'T is a weekend winner.

I have a hangover. How do you get rid of hangovers?

Charlotte: Lemsip, the max variety and a dip in a hot tub if you've got one.
Suzannah: A veggie fry up, a selection of good viewing material and constant naps.

Going anywhere nice this summer?

Charlotte: Yeah, I'll definitely be going to a few pubs gardens. That's nice right?!
Suzannah: I'm planning to find a beach, the sun and a constant supply of cocktails for a few weeks this summer.
